LEGION PRESENTS "AUNT LUCIA"

College Burlesque with Specialty Numbers Staged with Large Local Cast — Dancing to Follow Show which Is to Be Repeated Tonight

Two hours' fun was afforded those who attended the first presentation of "Aunt Lucia", a college burlesque in the Town hall last evening, presented under the auspices of Andover Post, 8, American Legion. One hundred fifty children in a baby pageant as a curtain-raiser was followed by old-time songs given by the always popular Square and Compass club and a Girls' chorus. Specialty numbers by Aunt Lucia's flappers and the Girls' chorus added variety to the movement of the play.

"Take Me Back to Baby Land" was read by Miss Catherine Winters and the curtain opened on the group of little tots, all apparently lost in slumber. They soon waked to the song of the birds and entered heartily into the story of the Bogie Man told by the reader.

The Square and Compass Glee club, gay in the prep caps of Bula Bula college and waving canes and college pennants gave a spirited rendering of old-time songs directed by F. Homer Foster, departing after enthusiastically giving the college cheers under the leadership of James Cole.

The cleaning of the fraternity room for the arrival of Miss Lucia Wakefield, a fabulously wealthy graduate of the college, whose riches it was hoped would ultimately benefit the institution was left to two preps impersonated by Sumner Davis and Arthur Mullins. Having accomplished their task, their endeavors to collect a tip from the seniors left them wiser but not richer men, to the infinite amusement of the audience.

The stage being now cleared for the arrival of Aunt Lucia, her place is inadvertently taken by Jerry, one of the students who in a moment of fun has dressed himself up as an old lady of sixty. Once having been mistaken for Aunt Lucia, he finds it difficult, even impossible, to explain who he really is. This case of mistaken identity leads to no end ot amusing complications. He finds it easy to accept the endearments of the best girls of his college chums—which pleases him hugely till he is in danger of losing his own girl to the college sheik. Moreover he becomes an object of the matrimonial attentions of the fathers of his college chums as well as of the eccentric Professor Gaddis, who forsakes his love of thirty years to enter the race for the hand of the supposed heiress. The arrival of a telegram from the real Miss Lucia Wakefield informing the college president that she is unable to be present and offering a million dollars for a college stadium brings an hour of reckoning and Jerry's true identity is revealed. The professor returns to his first love, the faithful Dean Howard, and the young people easily forgive the pranks of an afternoon all ending happily in the finale, "Say It Again."

Phil Higgins' unfailing high spirits and mercurial adaptability to slip from the part of the coy Aunt Lucia to the gruff college boy, very much on the defensive, made him an ideal choice for the part of Jerry. His hectoring classmates who violently objected to his caressing theig girls, with whom he took

Punchard Is Loser at Wakefield

Wakefield high opened up its home season Saturday by defeating Punchard high, 12 to 0. For the first two periods the teams were unable to score. In the third and fourth, however, Wakefield managed to get across the Punchard goal line once in each session. Capt. Dulong of the home team dislocated his shoulder and will be out of the game for three weeks.

In the final session with about five minutes remaining to be played a Punchard punt was blocked and recovered by George Simpson, Orange and Black quarterback, who picked up the ball and ran for a touchdown. The play, however, was brought back to where the ball was picked up and the touchdown not allowed.

P. A. 0—Tufts Fresh 7

Phillips academy opened its football season with a 7 to 0 loss to the Tufts Freshmen at Brothers field on Saturday.

The mid-summer's heat which held the unsheltered field in its grasp prompted Coach Ray Shepard to start a scrappy but green group of youngsters against the Baby Jumbos in hopes they could hold the visitors until the regulars could be sent in fresh against the heat-drugged foe.

The game opened with the visitors kicking off. Corrigan caught the ball on his own 20-yard line and lugged it five yards before he was buried by gray-jerseyed tacklers.

Andover could not gain. Burns, who has done very little kicking, dropped back to punt. The Andover line broke wide open and the kick was blocked. Milner recovered for Tufts.

A line plunge failed to gain more than a yard for the visitors and on the next play, Flint skirted his own right end for a touchdown. He easily outraced the Andover secondary and went over standing up. It was a run of 20 yards.

Batchelder, who started the Exeter game for Andover last year, was playing at left tackle for the fresh and he sent a drop kick through the uprights for the extra point.

The Andover varsity entered the game shortly after this. No sooner had they taken their positions than the game took on a different complexion. Withington the elongated right end of the Blue stepped into the Tufts backfield and picked a lateral pass from the outstretched hands of a Tufts back.

The Andover line which looked very poor on the offense all the afternoon failed to keep the Fresh line from breaking through and Andover panted from the Tufts 45-yard line.

The visitors' line duplicated the work of the Blue's forward wall and the Andover line sifted through to nail the Jumbos for no gain.

Essex County Agricultural School Notes

Miss May E. Foley, State Nutrition Specialist of Massachusetts Agricultural College, conducts a meeting in Community Meals at the Beverly Health Center on Friday, October 3. So many women who are responsible for church or grange suppers have asked the Extension Department for assistance that a special one day meeting has been planned for this project. Women from ten towns are to attend this meeting at the Beverly Health Center. They will then give back to their communities the suggestions which they receive.

Balanced meals, table setting, table service and decoration, and quantity recipes are some of the points discussed.

Miss Crawford, the Home Demonstration Agent, will give similar meetings in Saugus and Amesbury. The Home Demonstration Agent will be glad to furnish outlines to any organizations which could not send representatives to these meetings.

The following towns have organized Extension projects during October: Clothing; South Groveland, Georgetown, West Haverhill, Salisbury: Home Management; Lynnfield, Andover, Rockport, Amesbury, Merrimac, Salisbury, Newbury, Rocks Village: Home Nursing; Saugus, Middleton, Newbury, Amesbury: Child Development; Danvers, Saugus, Andover, Gloucester, Beverly, Boxford.

Boston & Maine Offers Dollar-Day Bargain

A one-dollar bill will be good for a return trip fare between any two points on the 2200 miles of the Boston and Maine Railroad system, on October 10, 11, 12 and 13, when the bargain days that attracted hundreds of travelers over the Columbus Day week-end last year will be repeated.

The entire system, which stretches through five states, from the Hudson River in New York to the seacoast in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, is open to the bargain-days rates and there are no limits placed on the distance that may be travelled or the number of tickets which may be purchased. Under the plan it is possible to travel such distances as from Portland, Maine, to Troy, N. Y. for a dollar, plus a one-way fare.

"Dollar Days" were inaugurated by the Boston and Maine Railroad two years ago when it was decided to introduce in transportation the bargain day ideas that have been the practice of retail stores. The plan met with such success that there were requests for a repeating, and the Columbus Day week-end was designated as a permanent time for the "Dollar Day" bargain on the Boston and Maine system.

Join the County Rat Campaign

Get ready for the biggest drive in history against the destructive rat, the worst mammal pest in the world. The campaign will be staged, county-wide, on November 14. After County Agent F. C. Smith had talked over the rat problem with Mr. E. M. Mills, a specialist on rodent control of the U. S. Biological Survey, it was decided that the only successful way to rid the county of rats was to organize the entire county. "Individuals in attempting to control rats do not keep up with their birthrate," says Mr. Mills, "but everyone working together will give permanent results."

Freshly prepaired baits will be furnished at actual cost. Powdered red squill will be used as the poison, the newest development in rat exterminators. And remember it only kills rats, the safest poison known to science. The baits will be complete, ready to use, nothing more to add.

Further details will appear in the next issue. Tell your neighbors about it, and urge them to get rid of their rats while you destroy yours. Don't forget to order the bait when the time comes.

IT CAN'T BE DONE . . .

You can't expect good health unless you eat NUTRITIOUS FOODS. To get QUALITY you must pay a fair price for it, for the value of any article is based on the QUALITY that goes into it. Housewives know that in their own baking they can buy inferior ingredients and produce a cheap loaf of bread, or buy the BEST OF FLOUR, use PLENTY OF PURE CREAMERY MILK, the FINEST OF PURE LEAF LARD, etc., etc., and the result will be a HEALTH-GIVING LOAF LIKE

20TH CENTURY BREAD

Wife (sweetly):"You used to steal kisses from me before we were married."

Husband:"Well, you heard what I said."

Teacher:"Who is the smartest man living?

Pupil: "Thomas A. Edison. He invented the phonograph and the radio so that people would stay up all night and use his electric light bulbs."

Johnson, chairman, Mrs. A. W. Lowe, Mrs. David C. Young, Mrs. William H. Pearce and Miss Ethel Eaton. Fifty-nine were seated at the tables, including the members of the church, their wives and husbands and resident members of other Baptist churches. Brooks, rector of Grafton, to Dr. Walter Vose Galick, of St. Mary's hospital, Rochester, Minnesota. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a cream-colored gown of Algerian silk gauze with bertha and trimmings of knife-pleated chiffon and yoke of tucked chiffon worked in Mexican stitch. Cancers Not All Alike

Cancers differ a great deal in malignancy and other respects, so that each case requires special study in order that the best possible treatment for that particular csae shall be applied.

Many cases of cancer can be cured. It is a mistake to think that a cancer is always and necessarily fatal. A wrong impression has been produced by dwelling on the fatal cases and failing to note how many patients have been made well.

There should be relatively few deaths from cancer of some parts of the body because the symptoms are noticeable from the first. Consequently, medical aid can be called in early and the proper means of cure employed. In cancer of the skin, lip and mouth the signs are apparent almost from the beginning, and so they are with cancer of the breast. Enough of these cases are on record to show that the chances of cure are good if the patient will apply to a capable physician at the first indications of danger. Cancer of the uterus can often be cured if taken in time.

The Lawrence state-aided cancer clinic is held at the Lawrence General hospital on the first and third Tuesdays of each month at 10.00 a.m.

Give Song Recital in Rome

The following story of a song recital in which local musicians took part is reprinted from the Rome Daily Sentinel, printed in Rome, N. Y., October 1:

The Wednesday Morning club opened its 1930-1931 season this afternoon at Teugega Country club in an atmosphere tinged with the romance of Old England, France, China and Spain. This atmosphere was furnished by the three guest artists, Howard Harrington and Irma Watson, and Mrs. Gertrude Pearce Paige, accompanist, all of Boston, who gave a delightful program of folk songs and piano selections.

The program of songs, entitled "Powder and Patches" was presented after a luncheon which was attended by between 140 and 150 members of the Wednesday Morning club, making this one of the largest meetings ever held by the organization.

Miss Watson and Mr. Harrington gave their various songs in costume and with action. The program opened with a group of English folk songs, "Mowing the Barley" "Briar Bush," "When Shall We Be Married, John?", "The Wraggle Taggle Gypsies, O!" and "John, Come Kiss Me now."

This was followed by Mrs. Paige's first group of piano selections, "Country Gardens, by Percy Grainger, "Traumerei," by Richard Strauss, and "Deux Petites Valses Espagnoles," by Granados.

Mr. Harrington, in a dashing Spanish garb, then sang five songs of the Spanish provinces, "Ay-Ay-Ay," "Basque Love Song," "El Punteado," "The Dark Shadow" and "Cielito Lindon." He displayed the versatility of his voice as he changed from the rollicking songs of the gay caballero to the somber strains of old Spanish folk songs.

Miss Watson in costume captivated her audience with her Chinese group during which her dress, voice and graceful gestures presented a charming Oriental picture. She sang "The Singing Girl of Shan," "A Chinese Prayer," "A Ripple I seem" and "Chin, Chin, Chinaman."

Mrs. Paige's last group consisted of "Orientale", by Amani, "Chanson Sans Paroles" by Arensky, and "Gavotte" from the Old French arranged by Eggeling.

The concluding number of the program showed Miss Watson and Mr. Harrington in costumes of the period of Louis Quinze singing "Say No More", "A Little More" and "Love Me Tonight."

In their duets, the lifting mezzo-contralto of Miss Watson was admirably supported by Mr. Harrington's mellow tenor. Both are accomplished artists. Mrs. Paige won approval with her accompaniments which were full of feeling.

"Daniel Webster" by Dr. Fuess to Come Out This Month

Dr. Claude M. Fuess, member of the faculty at Phillips academy for many years and widely known as an author has after ten years of diligent work prepared another book, the life history of Daniel Webster which has already been rated as one of the most important works of the current year.

In this book of two volumes Dr. Fuess clearly brings out the real life of America's greatest statesman, legislator, diplomat, lawyer and orator and brings vividly to his readers the life of a truly great man in his political and business affiliations, his picturesque law cases, his attitude on slavery and abolitionists, toward nullification, state rights and the Federal constitution, his relations with his family and by no means least his pride in the title, "Webster, the Farmer."

Dr. Fuess is well known as the author of "The Life of Caleb Cushing" and "Rufus Choate, Wizard of the Law." He spent ten years in gathering material for his "Daniel Webster," to a great extent from important manuscript collections and other sources never before available. He covers all phases of Webster's career as a lawyer, orator and statesman and presents his character and achievements freed from the misconceptions created by prejudiced critics. It is the first really comprehensive study of Webster in over sixty years.

"Inside" Information

Serve hot foods hot and on hot plates. Serve cold foods cold—not lake-warm. It is astonishing how many homemakers ignore this simple and obvious detail of an attractive meal.

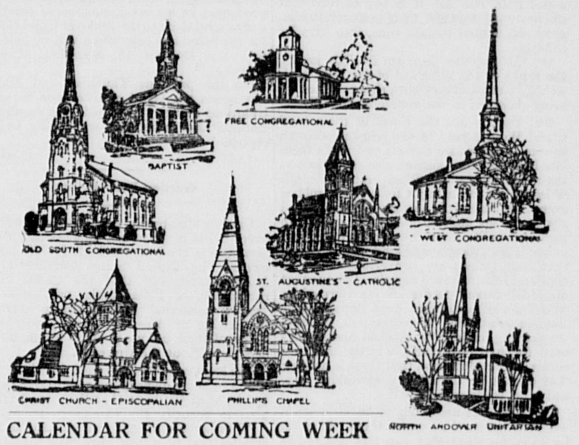

Apple butter may be made with or without cider and is a good means of using up windfall and other imperfect apples that must be cooked to be saved. The U. S. Department of Agriculture will tell you how to make it.

Use sturdy washable materials for kitchen curtains. Make them with a tuck in or near the heading to allow for shrinkage. Unbleached muslin, gingham, glass toweling, English prints, or Japanese crepe are good materials to use.

To make old-fashioned creamy rice pudding put a tablespoon of washed rice in a baking dish with one quart of milk, 1-3 cup of sugar, 1-8 teaspoon of nutmeg or cinnamon, and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Cook very slowly in the oven for two or three hours, stirring often. A cup of raisins may be added.

Water containing iron can usually be improved for laundry purposes by adding a little limewater or washing soda to the water. Stir it thoroughly, let the iron settle to the bottom, and draw off the clearest water. It is better to filter the water through cloth or other material.

Goats and the Rummage Sale

Although at a glance it may not be apparent that there is a close connection between goats and rummage sales, yet after serious thought one must admit the fact.

In our youth we had no great sympathy for goats, after having been seriously bunted by a pet pair, but still it is sad to read that efficiency is turning their natural fodder, good old dented tomato cans, into toys for children.

On this account they are forcibly joining the ranks of the three out of five with their wobbly teeth and now with rickety knees are being classified in the undernourished list.

But that is not the worst of these hard times. Women read in the economy column how to invert waste baskets and make them into hats and lamp shades, also such items as the art of tying a blue ribbon around a length of lead pipe and using it for a music roll or even a diploma. It is also stated that darned silk stockings and old pieces are made into rugs and quilts, that newspapers rolled and twisted, take the place of kindling wood, and that coat linings are converted into dress slips and sofa pillows. They also discover that discarded catsup bottles are transformed by wild dabs of paint into door stops, biscuit tins are substituted for rolling pins, old buttons strung for jewelry, cracked candlesticks used for hat rests and so forth until one comes to the conclusion that there is nothing that cannot be turned into something else, and so on, world without end.

But if people are going to be so stricken with this germ of economy there will never be anything that they can feel justified in passing on to some one less fortunate than themselves.

Then goats will grow spindling and rummage sales cease. However a great many people have not really digested the economy column so before they do an appeal is now made to their sense of justice and also neatness and order, and they are begged to pack up all unused articles, putting as many really good ones in for good measure as possible, and to send them to the Andover Guild House for the rummage sale which will be held on Saturday, October 18, beginning at nine o'clock.

On the previous Thursday and Friday afternoons the Guild will be open for contributions and anything including furniture, clothing and ornaments will gladly be accepted.

Garden Blue-Prints

Garden blue-prints with specifications for every blade of grass and dimensions for the flowers, are the latest wrinkle for the home owner. The United States Building Loan League announced that the Curtis Publishing Co. of Philadelphia, originators of "garden patterns" in an effort to improve the setting of American homes, will send copies of these unique plans to league members throughout the United States.

The local members will then distribute the sheets to home owners and prospective home owners with the hope that the plans will be used to beautify the various communities.

"The home setting is as important as the architectural plan, but very little attention is paid to it," says R. Holtby Myers, Los Angeles, president of the league. Few people have the talent to plan a beautiful garden and many home owners have either not realized their opportunities to beautify their home setting and incidentally enhance their home value, or have not attempted a garden at all.

"But most folks love flowers and dream of a garden when they dream of a home. I want our association to get these garden plans before the public so they can dream over them during the winter and follow them out in the spring.

"The plans are unique, like architectural drawings, with every blade of grass in place, and every flower petal harmoniously fitted into the scheme."

Pastor Emeritus

There is a wealth of sentiment behind the vote to elect Dr. Frank R. Shipman "pastor emeritus of the South church, free from responsibility or care." It relieves a tireless worker of a burden he reluctantly relinquishes. It recognizes his long service for the South church and expresses appreciation of all he has meant to it and to Andover. It grants his request to retire, yet permanently links him with this community in which he has stood forth so conspicuously for all that is good and noble in life.

He goes, yet he stays. His active service, ended after long years of industrious application to his calling here, is preserved in part to the church and town by extending him the opportunity to exert his influence, guidance and inspiration by occasional contact and oversight.

It was a gracious and fitting move to so honor one who through official connection, family ties and absorbing interest has been a dominating factor in the career of the church so many years. Even while he was president of Atlanta university the South church's welfare loomed large in his mind and scarcely a season passed that did not see him occupy the pulpit of the church occasionally.

This well-deserved tribute paid to the retiring minister of the South church means much to Andover for no man has ever done more in quiet ways for the welfare of the people of the church and the town than Dr. Shipman. It is pleasing to all that in granting retirement a way has been found to make possible a continuation of his interest in this community.

Comment on the retirement of Dr. Shipman would not be complete without reference to the young minister who has been associated with him as junior pastor of the South church during the past year—Rev. Frederick B. Noss. Young, stalwart and eager to serve, Mr. Noss has capably shared in the work of the church, aroused enthusiasm among the young people and tactfully supplemented Dr. Shipman's pastorial activities among the aged, infirm and sorrowing in the parish.

Lions Club

An auspicious start has been made by the Lions club of Andover. With a membership larger than is usual at organization, with a representative roster and officers who are among Andover's leading citizens, the success of the town's first service club is assured at the outset. That is will become an important factor in the civic and industrial success of the town almost goes without saying for throughout the world Lions clubs are notable for accomplishment of much that is worth while in communities where they exist.

Frequent gatherings of men who are active in the business life of a town are bound to be of benefit both to the membership and indirectly to all the citizens. With the inspiration of notable improvements in conditions that has been brought about by intelligent study of community needs in other places similar results are certain to be atained here.

There is every reason to expect the realization of the prediction of Selectman Frank H. Hardy who said at the recent organization meeting that the members would "look back in later years and regard this as a red letter day in the history of civic Andover."

Fire-Prevention Week that is to be observed throughout the nation next week in response to a proclamation by the President has more significance than ever this year, due to the protracted drought. While vegetation has not suffered to any great extent in New England, lack of rain has made the brush and forest fire hazard alarmingly great. It is only by repeated emphasis on the need of caution that serious fire losses can be lessened. Civic organizations, women's clubs, school authorities and every one interested in public welfare should do everything possible to aid in the important observance. The Massachusetts legislature enacted a law at its last seession providing for a $25 fine for throwing a cigar, cigarette stub or lighted match into the dry grass or brush by the roadside. This was aimed mainly at careless automobilists who have in such a manner caused many serious fires in woods in the past. Violation of the law is difficult to detect in many instances, but the mere passage of such an act ought to have a deterrent effect.

Changing the Punch Harder, school organ at the Punchard High school, from magazine to newspaper form should further improve this creditable student publication. Prepared by a staff of pupils under the supervision of Mervin E. Stevens of the faculty the Punch Harder has become an important adjunct to the school's activities. Greater success than ever will be possible under the new arrangement.

The sudden death of the wife of George W. Hinman, whose long service as instructor at Phillips academy has made his family widely known, arouses the sympathy of the community for Mr. Hinman and his children. Mrs. Hinman's quiet influence in and outside her home has been one of the ties that helped link the Town and the Hill in cordial relation.

With the American Legion convention in Boston and the notable parade that is sure to electrify those who view it, absorbing attention, added interest locally is given to the efforts of Andover post, which will repeat tonight the play it presented so acceptably in the town hall last evening. The production will not only add to the funds of the organization but has and will afford genuine enjoyment to many people, for the Legion has something to offer which provides pleasing entertainment to all who witness one of the best and biggest home-talent shows ever given here.

In the recent passing of James C. Hunter Andover loses a citizen who had a long and notably successful career as a dress and silk goods salesman in this vicinity. A staunch, industrious man, it is small wonder that, though long past the age for military duty, he joined Andover's Company H of the State Guard in the World War and performed his duties as faithfully and efficiently as many a younger man in the service. Loyal to trade, to town and to country he led an exemplary life in this community that aroused admiration for its integrity and usefulness.

Miss Emily F. Carleton, who died this week at her farm home in North Andover, had had a long and successful career as a teacher in the public schools of North Andover and Andover. Thorough in her instruction, and firm in her discipline, she had given hundreds of boys and girls of the two towns training in the fundamentals of education and character that have laid the foundations for many successful careers. For some nineteen years she had taught at the Center school in West Andover. Previously she had served as teacher at the Center and the Farnham district schools in North Andover. She often walked from her North Andover home to the West Andover school, characteristic of the old school type of teacher who produced results that brought credit to her and the schools in which she taught. She was one of the most ardent workers in the Unitarian church at North Andover as long as her strength permitted and often raised in her own beautiful gardens all of the flowers that were distributed to the members of the Sunday school of the church on Children's Sundays. Her life was devoted to instruction and no can one estimate to the full the far-reaching influence of her long service in the educational field.

PRESENT "AUNT LUCIA"

great liberties in the role of aunt, were played by Charles Murray and Frank Davis. Dick's dad and the Butter and Egg Man in the persons of William Doherty and Douglas Hutcheson did their best as suitors with an original but unconvincing brand of love-making.

James Flannery as the eccentric Professor Gaddis offered an impersonation of real merit, and his was without doubt the outstanding bit of acting in the play—make-up, voice, facial expression and movement all contributed to an excellent impersonation.

Dean Howard, in the person of Mrs. Arthur Coleman, with the high giggle of a nervous spinster and the tortoise-bowed spectacles of the college dean played the part of Professor Gaddis' faithful sweetheart. Thaxter Eaton was the dignified college president and Mrs. George Walsh was his attractive wife. The jolly college girls were Esther Valentine, Eva Bourassa and Alice Nelligan with George Early as the fraternity president.

The college flappers, introduced by Sumner Davis as one of the preps, all men in female attire, were the burlesque feature of the show. Though less than half of those advertised on the bill made an appearance each one raised a laugh. They were Byron Feeney, Earl Urban, Joe Schultz, Martin Darby, Duncan Bissett, Joe Lynch, Danny Little, Joe Levi, Ralph Berry, Thomas Dea and Claremont Gray.

Pretty numbers were the song with flashlights "You and the Man in the Moon", and "Breezin' Along" by the girls' chorus in sailor suits.

The show will be repeated again tonight and will be followed by dancing with music by Mal Lundgren's orchestra.

The ushers were members of the Legion in uniform: Percy Dole, Joseph Remmes, Frank Nicoll, Herman Hilton and Edward Vannett.

William Burbine was at the piano, with the exception of the Square and Compass club choruses when the accompaniments were played by John A. Arnold.

The show was staged under the direction of Miss Norvilla de Haven of Connersville, Indiana through the Universal Producing company of Fairfield, Iowa.

To Hold Drive for Andover Guild

Arthur Sweeney, chairman of Andover Guild of Board Directors called a mass meeting at the Guild House Monday night to plan for raising money for running the Guild. The following organizations sent representatives: American Legion, St. Matthew's Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Knights of Columbus, American Legion Auxiliary, Rebekahs, Woman's Relief Corps and Thimble Club.

It was decided to conduct a community drive the week of October 13th. Frank McDonald was elected chairman of the drive with Edward A. Anderson as treasurer, and Margaret Davis as secretary. The following persons were named by their organization chairman to serve on the drive publicity committee: David Coutts, Square and Compass Club; Charles Gilliard, St. Mathew's Lodge; Thomas Gorrie, Garfield Lodge of Knights of Pythias; James Kinnear, Andover Lodge of Odd Fellows; William Doherty, Knights of Columbus; Mrs. Millie B. Hammond, Rebekahs; Mrs L. D. Pomeroy, Thimble Club; Mrs. Carrie Buchan, Woman's Relief Corps; and Mrs. Joseph Miller, American Legion Auxiliary.

A special meeting of the Andover Guild Publicity Committee was held at the Guild house Thursday evening with Chairman Frank McDonald presiding. It was decided to postpone the date of the drive to the week of October 20, in order to acquaint the public with the work the organization is doing.

Many people do not realize that the Andover Guild is thirty-five years old, the only purely local organization in Andover which has grown out of the needs of the community to serve all ages, creeds, and classes regardless of the size of the pocketbook. The committee believes that the public should be made thoroughly familiar with the work the Guild is doing before it is asked to give.

The organization has been supported in the past through the efforts of a few enthusiastic individuals who believed in it whole heartedly. But its activities have now grown to such an extent that it has become a community undertaking. Through the Summer Playground, Guild house center, Christmas celebration, and Easter egg hunt, it is doing a work for the community at large and should be supported by the community.

The outstanding organizations in town are backing the movement and have undertaken the raise of $6000 to support the Guild activities for the year 1930-31. Representatives from these organizations will canvass the town the week of October 20. Every individual in Andover will be given the opportunity to share the responsibility of safeguarding Andover's young people by offering them wholesome recreation, a safe, sane, and pleasant place to play both summer and winter.

The next meeting of the drive committee will be held at the Guild house Friday, October 10, at eight o'clock. Fifty canvassers are needed. Everyone willing to work for this worthy cause is requested to be present at the meeting. Teams will be formed and captains elected at that time.

Hens Slaughtered by Dog

The Andover police are combing the woods of West Andover for a vicious "wolf-dog" which early Wednesday morning killed thirty-two hens belonging to Charles Furnari, who conducts a hen farm at 44 Chandler road in West Andover.

Early in the morning he entered two separate hencoops after leaping over a high wire fence. In one he killed twelve hens and in the other twenty.

Abbot Academy Notes

Miss Bailey conducted the second evening service of the present school year on Sunday, September 29.

On Monday evening, at a meeting over which Mary Smead, '31, presided, the new girls were formally welcomed into the Gargoyle and Griffin clubs. Miss Bailey pointed out the value of competition when it is followed by harmonious and friendly relations, as in the case of room-mates who belong to opposing clubs; Mary Bacon, Gargoyle captain and Lisette Micoleau, Griffin captain welcomed the new members, and club and school songs were sung.

While the Senior class, with Miss Bailey, Miss Bean and Miss Ward as its guests, was enjoying the bright moonlight at its picnic at Haggett's Pond, the underclassmen were passing a pleasant evening in Davis Hall, where tables of bridge and continuous music for dancing were to everyone's taste.

A party under the guidance of Miss Bean motored to the historic houses of Lexington and Concord on Wednesday, October 1. Two groups of horseback riders took advantage of the free day to be out in the fine fall weather.

Friday, October 3, is the date for the dinner of the Trustees of Abbot Academy, which will be held at the Yale Club in Boston. At this dinner and meeting it is hoped that the newly appointed trustees will be present: Mrs. Constance Parker Chipman of Boston, and Miss Margaret S. Morriss, Dean of Pembroke College.

The teas given to the Abbot faculty and students on Wednesday, October 8, by the ladies of the South church and by the Rev. Charles Henry and Mrs. Henry of Christ church will repeat a courtesy which is always appreciated, for they will enable the school to meet and talk with the ladies of the congregations.

Bible Presented to Abbot Academy

"This Bible is the Property of Nehemiah and Sarah Abbot." So reads the beautifully written inscription in the five-volume Bible with "original notes by Thomas Scott", published in 1814 by Dodge and Savre. The Bible was given to Sarah Abbot (the Madam Abbot whose name Abbot Academy bears) by her husband, and was given by her to "O. Johnson". From the descendant of Osgood Johnson, Mrs. Isaac Sprague of Wellesley, has come this Bible, which Abbot Academy is glad to place among its treasures.

Two young Yorkshiremen on holiday in Portsmouth decided to pay a visit to one of the big battleships in the harbor.

"Yes, certainly," replied the sailor obligingly.

They proceeded to the engine-room, where the sailor began to explain how they worked, and the youths were amazed to find that the engines were 75,000 norsepower.

"By gum!" exclaimed the younger one; then said: "I'd give you a bob to show us the stables!"—London Answers.

Why Not a Bigger Tip?

They were eating at the cafeteria and she noticed that he took a quarter out of one pocket and put it in the other.

"What's the idea?" she asked curiously.

"I'm tipping the waiter."—Portland Evening Express.

Migration of Birds Now Fixed Habit

Scientists can only guess at the meaning of the arrival of the first robin in the spring, or the southward flight of geese across the late autumn sky, in the opinion of Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and president of the American Ornithologist's Union. Behind migration lie such a multitude of causes, reaching back through the ages, that men have been unable to ascertain the truth.

Constantly a student of bird life, Dr. Wetmore has made special studies in the Salt Lake Valley, the Bighorn Basin in Wyoming, the pampas of Argentina, the coasts of Uruguay, the sand dunes of Buenos Aires, and many other vantage points throughout the Western Hemisphere. Dr. Wetmore has written a book on the migrations of birds, just published, in which he sums up his personal obversations and correlates them with the findings of ornithologists for the past 200 years, with the result that a number of misunderstandings concerning bird life are cleared up.

"The entire act of migration is so utterly complex that no single factor may be ascribed as the absolute cause," Dr. Wetmore states, but he takes as his hypothesis that migration has arisen from movements induced by seasonal and climatic changes in certain species intil it has become heredity instinct, "a part of the life-cycle of the individual," and now actuated by physiological conditions.

The habits of ages have become so well fixed that weather conditions now have little to do with the migrations of birds, except to permit them to travel or hold them back, as the case may be. Redstarts wintering in the West Indies, or wagtails spending the cold season in Central Africa, notice no difference in temperature or climate conditions between November and April, yet in the latter months they regularly move North toward the summer home.

In such matters as the speed of flight of birds, the time of migration, lines of migration, sense of direction, and mortality among migrant birds, Dr. Wetmore sets down many interesting facts. Large birds, such as loons, cranes, ducks, and hawks regularly fly by day, while the majority of small birds, such as warblers, fly-catchers, and sparrows, fly by night. The chief factor here is the necessity on the part of the smaller birds to seek heir food by day, and not fear of attack in day flight. Fasting for a day is no hardship for many of the larger birds.

Migrating birds commonly fly at an altitude no higher than 3,000 feet, although birds of strong flight have been known to reach an altitude of 29,000 feet. Contrary to common belief, flight becomes increasingly difficult as the bird rises above 3,000 feet. Birds commonly fly against or across a wind current, and are upset if they fly with a strong wind.

As to the speed of birds, Dr. Wetmore destroys a number of illusions. The smaller perching birds fly at from twenty to thirty-seven miles an hour, while the ducks and geese range from forty-two to fifty-nine miles. Most birds are probably capable of doubling their normal speed for short distances, but the greatest speed recorded was that of the common swift of Eurasia, observed from an airplane to be making seventy miles an hour in normal flight.

The ability of birds to maintain directions unfailingly and to return year after year to the same spot from great distances, as many do, is ascribed by Dr. Wetmore to a sense of direction which is no more explicable than a similar sense of direction in some men and other mammals.

The greatest traveler among birds is the Arctic tern, which makes an 11,000-mile journey twice a year from the Arctic to the Antarctic and return. Among others that range widely are tree sparrows, juncos, brown creepers, golden-crowned kinglets, robins, grackles, cowbirds, and various species of ducks, which nest in the northern parts of the United States or in Canada, and winter near the Gulf of Mexico.

One aid in obtaining data on bird habits has been the banding of birds, which was begun scientifically by C. C. Mortensen in Denmark in 1897. Banding in the United States is now under the direction of the Bureau of Biological Survey of the department of Agriculture. Adult birds are trapped without injury and the young birds are not molested.

Dr. Wetmore concludes that while in the past fifty tears many uncertainties have been cleared away in regard to migration, we must look to the future to explain definitely the basic reasons for it, the cause of the varying lengths of the journey made by different birds, and the method of orientation.

Memories of Shelley in Small Italian Town

On July 8, 1822, the poet Shelley and his friend, Lieutenant Williams, were drowned when their little schooner foundered off Viareggio, Italy, on a voyage from Leghorn to Spezia. Their bodies, washed ashore on the beach were there cremated in the presence of Trelawney, Leigh Hunt, and Byron. There is a monument to Shelley by an Italian, Urbano Lucchesi, in the Piazza Shelley on the western side of the town.

The boat in which Shelley went to his doom was built after designs made by his friend, Lieutenant Williams, a British naval officer. It was called the Don Juan. Shelley and his wife lived in a bare dwelling on the Gulf of Spezia, known as the Casa Magni. It was there he was en route from Leghorn with Lieutenant Williams and a sailor boy, when the storm in which all three perished overtook them. Capt. Edward Trelawney, a seaman friend of Shelley's, tracked down the bodies of Shelley and Williams, and undertook the burning of them on the shore near Viareggio on August 15. The poet's ashes were then collected and buried in the new Protestant cemetery at Rome.

Wooden Cannon Used by Japs Against Russians

In the summer of 1865, relates the Trans-Pacific Review, when a few British warships hove in sight in the waters near Kyushu, the samurai of Satsuma, seeing the ships were out of gunshot from the shore, put out to the sea with several cannon. Arriving within range, they fired, but the shot failed to reach the ship. They were a little confused and fired at random but none struck. The English sailors, looking from their ship, laughed heartily at them. Suddenly a thundering boom of cannon was heard from the British ships and in a few moments the Japanese ship was seen no more except her cannon, which were floating in the water. Those floating cannon astonished the English sailors. They were made of wood hooped with bamboo. In the Russo-Japanese war the wooden cannon were again used to blow off the enemy's wire entanglements.

Saved "Bonny Prince"

Flora MacDonald was a Scottish woman of the MacDonald clan, born 1720, died 1790. Like others of her clan, she was a supporter of Prince Charles. After the battle of Culloden, 1746, in which the Scottish troops were defeated, Charles was obliged to flee and took refuge at Benbecula, where Flora lived. She disguised the prince as a maid servant to herself, and traveled on horseback and passed through many dangers, finally reaching the island of Skye in safety, from which the prince made his escape. Flora was tried and imprisoned for assisting him in his escape, but was finally released in 1747. In 1750 she married Allen MacDonald, a kinsman, and came to America, 1774. She died in 1790, and the Flora MacDonald college was organized as a memorial in 1896.

Country of Forests

In the little republic of Latvia on the Baltic Riviera, more than one-third of the territory is covered by forest. Seaports and inland towns, villages and farmsteads are bidden to keep their distance. This sight of the monarchy of trees where the wild life of feather and fur has been immemorably happy is reserved for the traveler who seeks in the Old world places which are really olden, older than masonry and moats, as old as earliest time. Pine, fir and beech reign supreme, and in the Livonian Courland district the forests reach as far as the very dunes of the seacoast.

Orchestra's Real Meaning

An orchestra is a band of performers on various instruments, including especially those of the viol class, adapted for rendering the larger kinds of concerted music, as symphonies, overtures, etc., and the accompaniments of operas, oratorios, masses, and the like, or for playing the slighter concerted music for theatrical performances, dances, etc. It is commonly distinguished from the military or street band of players on wind instruments and from a group of solo players for rendering chamber music.

Nero Model Youth at First

The emperor Nero when he first ascended his throne was an extremely kind and tender-hearted young man, hating by nature to cause anybody pain, and trained by the humane Seneca to respect the lives and liberties of all men. He was the true grandson of the large-hearted Germanicus, once the idol of the Roman people; and neither the pitilessness of his mother nor the brutality of his father were yet to be found in his character.—The Mentor-World Traveler.

Testing Pencil Leads

Wearing qualities of different types of lead for use in pencils are tested by an apparatus somewhat resembling a phonograph, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. An electrically driven turntable, covered with drawing paper, contains a center disk which revolves with the turntable. This disk is connected to two other similar disks, at the rim of the turntable, by a spring belt, thus driving these disks. One of them has four metal tubes in which the leads are inserted.

The September Sky

The dominant feature of the eastern sky during September evenings is a large dipper formed by seven bright stars. It is not usually called a dipper, but it looks like one and is therefore easily located.

Directly in the east the great Square of Pegasus, tipped up on one corner, serves as the bowl of the dipper. The first three stars in the handle, together with the stars around it, form the constellation Andromeda, the Chained Princess. The star at the end of the handle is the brightest one in Perseus.

Perseus is the arrow of stars in the northeast pointing upward along the Milky Way to Cassiopeia's Chair. Its most famous star is Algol, the Demon Star, so-called because every two and one-half days its light is dimmed for a few hours to only one-third the usual brightness. This periodic winking is caused by a faint companion star, which revolves around Algol and partially eclipses it.

Under the handle of this big dipper in the east are two small triangles of stars. The upper one is named the Triangle; the lower one is Aries, the first constellation of the zodiac.

Two thousand years ago spring began when the sun entered the constellation Aries. Now the vernal equinox, the location of the sun when it crosses the equator, has shifted westward. The vernal equinox is not marked by a bright star; it may be located by following down the lower left side of the Square of Pegasus and one length beyond. The sun is here on March 21. It does not now enter the constellation Aries until late in April.

Capella is the brilliant yellow star below the arrow of Perseus in the northeast. Its color is like that of the sun. Fomalhaut, low in the southeast, twinkles in the V-shaped configuration of the Southern Fish.

Three planets add interest to the autumn skies. Saturn is fast disappearing in the southwest. It was conspicuous during the summer months when the remarkable rings were much admired by those who observed it with the telescope.

The great planet Jupiter rose slightly north of east at ten-thirty in the evening of September 1. Thereafter it will appear four minutes earlier from night to night, so that it will come into view at eight-thirty o'clock at the end of the month. Jupiter is brighter than any of the stars, and is surpassed only by Venus, which has now become the evening star, setting in the west soon after sunset.

Both Jupiter and Venus will continue to be visible in the evening throughout the autumn and winter, gradually drawing together in the west. Toward the end of the year Mars will compete with them for attention in the evening sky.

Jones had driven his car into a garage for a slight adjustment to the carburetor. While he was waiting he seemed greatly interested watching one of the mechanics working on another car. In about 15 minutes the foreman stepped up to advise him that his car was ready.

"I've been watching that mechanic over there," he said to the foreman. "There's a man who knows his business. He didn't spill a drop of oil on the ground. He put down the hood gently, fastened it securely and left no fingerprints on it. He wiped his hands on clean waste before opening the door, spread a clean cloth over the upholstery, meshed his gears noiselessly and then drove slowly into the street. That's my idea of a conscientious worker."

"Yeah, that's his own car," replied the foreman as he walked away.—The Pathfinder

Shopping Instinct

A young matron in whom the shopping instinct was strong, asked a German butcher the price of hamburger steak.

"Twenty-five cents a pound," he replied.

"But," said she, "the price at the corner store is only twelve cents."

"Vell," asked Otto, "Vy you don't puy it down there?"

"They haven't any," she said.

"Ya, ya," said the butcher, "Ven I don't have it I sell it for ten cents only."

Washington Current Comment

Mr. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture, accuses Russia of sending American wheat prices down into the bulb by selling fifteen million bushels short on the Chicago exchange, and wants to know how that country is going to make delivery over our tariff of 42 cents per bushel. A Way Out

A friend was showing a Scotsman round his cutlery factory. "Here's a souvenir for you, Mac," he said, when the visit was over, and handed him a pocket-knife. "But," he added, "you'll have to give me a penny for it, so it cannot cut our friendship."

"Have ye got change?" he asked, anxiously.

"Sorry," replied his friend. "I'm afraid I haven't."

Mac thought for a minute. "Then ye can just gie me four more knives," he said.—Forbes Magazine.

"Oh, yessum," he replied, without looking up. "We often have it as tough as this at home."

Siftings

"The Ballardvale Gazette and Christmas Visitor" seems to have antidated The Andover Townwman as a local news sheet, although whether its life continued after Vol. 1, No. 1, printed December 25, 1867 and which now lies before the Townswoman, no one seems to know. It was published by the ladies of the Union Congregational society for their annual festival and printed at the Lawrence American office. The program of the entertainment included a march (instrumental); "Village Bells" sung by a choir of thirty young ladies; a recitation, William Tell's "Apostrophe to Liberty"; a song, "The Gypsy Boy" by J. H. Proctor; the "Cow Boy Song" by the choir; a recitation, selections from A. Ward by N. M. Macomber; "Come in and Shut the Door" sung by Miss Nellie Murray; "The Wreck of the Hesperus" by T. F. Winthrop; and "The Sleighing Song" by the choir. A touch of playfulness is intended to be added by the following notice "In this Song we propose a grand SleighRide to Lowell. The Ladies are kindly requested not to scream while going down hill. Gents will see that the Buffalos are nicely tucked in, and that their arms are in such position as to prevent the Young Ladies from falling out."

The newspaper itself is a four-page sheet, twenty-one by fifteen inches with six columns to a page. An enterprising advertising manager sold space to merchants not only in Ballardvale and Andover, but also in Lawrence and even Boston. Among the Boston advertisers may be noted Joseph Squire & Co., pork, lard, hams, tripe, sausages, pigs' feet and extra lard oil, 39 and 41 North street. Other Boston merchants had their places of business 96 Blackstone street, 125 Federal street, 37 Long Wharf, 3 South Market with millinery and dry goods at 17 Franklin street, 15 Milk street.

James A. Treat & Co. of Turnpike street, Lawrence were advertising paints, oils, Donner's kerosene and spindle oil while the specialty of the Methuen Woolen mills was fancy shawls. Byron Truell & Co., besides selling foreign and domestic dry goods were also manufacturers of cloaks and mantillas. Mrs. M. Cockshott advanced as her specialty "Bonnets bleached and pressed at shortest notice".

In Ballardvale W. D. Stark was supplying customers with beef, pork, mutton and hams and Joseph T. Lovejoy was dispensing milk. Mrs. William Crook offered her services in "cloak and dress making and machine stitching done to order."

Among the Andover advertisers are many names familiar to long-time residents of Andover: Charles Mayer, harness maker; John Findley, fish market; Valpey Brothers, dealers in provisions, meat and vegetables; Henry G. Tyer, India Rubber manufacturer; Warren F. Draper, Andover circulating library, terms 2 cents a day, guarantee required for return of books; Henry Burtt, harness maker, livery and boarding stable; John H. Flint, dealer in beef, pork, mutton, lard, hams, etc.; J. W. Barnard, boots, shoes and rubbers; William Poor, manufacturer of express, grocery and business wagons; Cornell & Chandler, dealers in wood and coal; Goerge H. Parker, drugs and medicines; George H. Poor, attorney and counsellor-at-law; John H. Chandler, daily and weekly news depot; J. E. Whiting, watchmaker and jeweler; Charles L. Carter, Mansion House; George E. Pike, hogs slaughtered and dressed, orders left at his place of residence, corner Main and Green streets; William Barnett, cooking, parlor, and air-tight stoves, pumps set and repaired; H. P. Beard, J. L. Smith and A. S. Manning, dry goods and groceries. T. A. Holt, C. W. Higgins and E. T. Wardwell, dry goods and groceries; H. J. Newman, grainer.

Although the editorial refers to "the depressed state of business in our village" it concludes on an optimistic note the prayer "that while the present year closes with uncertainty, that the new year will open with the bright prospect of permanent prosperity, and that our factories will soon echo with the sounds of active industry."

The "History of Our Village" and the story of the organization of "Our Temperance Societies" contributed by "W" sketch a picture of Ballard Vale, its busy factories and struggles for civic betterment which are of interest even after the lapse of more than sixty years.

History of Our Village

Messrs. Editors:—Thinking it might be interesting to the numerous patrons of your maiden sheet, I have hastily drawn up a condensed history of the rise and progress of our village, which in so short a space of time, comparatively, has risen to such gigantic proportions.

Where, but a few years ago, nothing existed but a swamp, now rise the lofty spires and towering chimneys which are a distinguishing feature of our village. The busy hum of toil and enterprise, ceasing only with the going down of the sun, and not always then, is heard where the frog and the owl held forth in their native elements, and the whip-poor-will gave her nightly serenade. The majestic Shawsheen rolled on then, as now, through these valleys, but no artificial breastwork obstructed its passage, causing the roar which is so familiar to our ears as not to attract even passing notice. Some are living now, who can remember the only house which stood on the site of this populous village. This house stood very nearly on the site of the Ballard Vale Company's Factory, on the east side of the river, and connected with it was a grist mill of small proportions, which was the resort of the farmers for miles around, who, with a bag or two of corn on their horse's back, (for this was previous to the era of wagons and locomotives) made their way here, through the almost unbroken forest, to obtain that article which is supposed to enter largely into what are rudely termed "Johnny-cakes." And here, pardon me if I relate a story in connection with the novel manner referred to, of conveying grain to be ground.

A man, whether noted for his wisdom or not you may know as I proceed, had a horse which was not overburdened with adipose matter (vulgarly called "fat") and which would have been none the worse for an oat or two, and one day starting out with two bags of grain on the horse's back, for the old mill, was met by a neighbor, who said that his horse had too much of a load. The leader of the horse insisted that he had not, but his neighbor insisting that he had, the driver came to the conclusion that he would relieve his horse of a part of the load, but did not see how it could be done, till all of a sudden a thought struck him; so leading the horse to a place where he could mount, he did so, and placing one bag of grain upon his own shoulders, and leaving the other on the horse's back, he resumed his journey. Without stopping to suggest whether this operation relieved the horse as much as the mind of its humane driver, I will return to my topic.

Perhaps it might be interesting to some to know the origin of the name of our village. The mill and house referred to were owned by a man named Ballard, and from him and the natural situation of the place arose the now justly celebrated Ballard Vale. Truly "tall oaks from little acorns grow."

It may be interesting also, to some, to know the derivation of the name of our noble river, to which source our village owes its very existence. It was the custom when the Indians inhabited our forests, for certain tribes or bands to occupy and claim posession of certain rivers. Thus it was here; a tribe of Indians occupied the banks of this river from its source to its mouth, and it is probable that this very spot was the site of one of their wigwams. Their headquarters were about a mile south of here, and near the farm now owned by Benjamin Burtt. All who are accustomed to fish for the finny tribe in that vicinity, are aware of the fact that a species of grass grows there, very rank and tall, and with an exceedingly sharp edge. The Indians, on their fishing and hunting excursions up and down the banks of the river, wearing none of the modern article termed breeches, very frequently made incisions above their ankles, with the grass referred to, and they accordingly termed it saw-shin! from which the name now so loved and honored, Shawsheen, was subsequently derived. This may seem to some very singular and even ridiculous, but nevertheless it is authentic.

Following the course of time from this period, houses began to spring up, the Ballard Vale Co.'s Flannel Mills were constructed, inviting labor, and of course followed by the springing up of more buildings. To this company belongs the honor of making the first piece of all-wool delaine goods ever manufactured in this coutnry.

Then the Boston and Maine Railroad, formerly running east of this place, and with a depot upon it in the same building which is at present occupied by our worthy and esteemed fellow citizen, Dea. Proctor, and his family, was changed so as to run directly through the village. Then followed the erection of the depot, containing the hall in which those inestimable blessings to Ballard Vale, Shawsheen Division Sons of Temperance and Good Mission Lodge of Good Templars, since sprung into existence. Next came the Machine Shop and Foundry, and the famous hotel lately designated the "Beedle," and now the "Raynor House." Of the growth of the place since, most of your readers are already familiar. We now have one of the most prosperous and best managed woolen manufactories in this country. We also have one of the most extensive file and steel manufacturing establishments in the world, covering a space of nearly four acres, and capable of giving employment, when the works are in full operation, to about six hundred persons. Connected with these works are Crucible, Fire Brick, and Stove Polish manufactories. The productions of these different departments are not surpassed by any similar establishments in this country, and the company has already a world wide reputation.

We also have a Hat Factory (that was), Shoe and Gas manufactories (the latter in abundance), six stores, blacksmith, tin and barber shops, one church and two others that are going to be, four religious societies, a Lodge of Good Templars, a Division of Sons of Temperance, a Temple of Honor, and lastly to our shame and disgrace be it said, three or four rum shops.

But the crowning glory of our village will be the public common, on the top of "Pole Hill," to contain fifty acres, in the centre of which is to be raised a magnificent flagstaff, to bear aloft the emblem of our common country.

Our Temperance Organizations

Messrs. Editors:—Thinking that a brief sketch of the rise and progress of two societies, which have conferred such rich blessings, and been instrumental in bringing, by the blessing of God, peace and happiness to so many families of our village, might interest a portion, at least, of your readers, I have hastily sketched the following:—

In the Fall of 1863, the population of the Vale had reached the highest number ever residing in it, a census taken that year showing 1225 inhabitants. A very large sum was disbursed monthly from the manufactories here, reaching nearly, or quite, $40,000 per month. As a natural consequence men who came here, and others who resided here, and who would sell their souls for gain, opened dram-shops one after another, till some eight or ten, and perhaps more, were daily dealing out their vile decoctions, till some of the good people finally became aroused, as the tide of intemperance growing stronger and stronger, seemed likely to overwhelm everything that was good, and convert the village into a pandemonium. A few persons met at the Depot Hall at the request of the worthy Post Master, and resolved to form a Division of the Sons of Temperance, an Order which has been instrumental in taking thousands from the mire and filth of intemperance and placing them where they should be as becomes those formed in the very image of God. Accordingly on the evening of Dec. 16th, 1863 the Division was organized, and named Shawsheen, from the goodly stream which waters our village.

The number of charter members was 32, and the first presiding officer was Mr. W. G. Waters, who was succeeded by Mr. N. M. Macomber. The membership of the Division rapidly increased, till at one time over two hundred persons had embraced the principles of total abstinence and become shining lights in their families and the community. Some of the most inveterate drinkers threw off the shackles of thraldom which bound them to King Alcohol, and have, to this day sacredly kept their solemn convenant, and have become freemen indeed. Time and space will not permit a detailed account of the doings of this organization, but many will remember and bless the day that it sprung into existence. The following persons in the order named, have severally filled the office of W. P. with much credit to themselves, and profit to the division:

W. G. Waters, N. M. Macomber, A. J. Dearborn, W. F. Lacount, Frank Banks, John E. Farnham, Jas. R. Murray, J. W. Dearborn, S. W. Blunt, A. S. Biggar, Rev. John S. Day, David Priest, Walter Murray, Matthew Winton, Robert Murray, Thos. Hutchinson.

The Division meets on Wednesday evenings at Temperance Hall, and members of the Order are cordially invited to visit them, and those who yet remain outside of its walls, and especially those who may be addicted to the intoxicating cup, are earnestly urged to cast in their lot and help to drive intemperance from the land.

At the time alluded to, when the membership of the Division had reached two hundred, there seemed for various reasons to be a demand for another temperance organization, the smallness of the Hall of meeting being one, and a desire on the part of some to take another step, and be initiated into the mysteries of the Order of Good Templars, but perhaps the greatest reason was the fact that this Order placed both sexes on the same footing in the temperance family. Accordingly 33 persons petitioned for a charter, and on the evening of June 26th, 1865, they were organized into a Lodge. From the formation of the Lodge till now, the membership has constantly increased till 140 members in good standing are enrolled under the banner of Faith, Hope, Charity, and its star is still in the ascendent. The meetings of the Lodge were never of more interest than now, and being characterized by a high moral tone no one can fail to be benefited who comes within the pale of its influence. This is but one branch of an Order, which in this State has 250 Lodges, and a membership of more than 25,000, and constantly increasing. Its motto is "Total Abstinence," and "Prohibition," and on this line it is determined to fight it out. Members of the Order are cordially invited to meet with the Lodge at their Hall, the same occupied by the Division on any Monday evening, the meetings commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock. To those who have not passed within the mystic circle, a most hearty invitation is extended, and rest assured that all will receive a brother's hand and sister's welcome. The following W. C. T.'s have presided over the Lodge since its organization:

S. W. Blunt, W. H. B. Woodlin, Frank Banks, N. M. Macomber, Jas. R. Murray, George Byram, J. C. Buswell, F. G. Haynes, Rev. John S. Day, Henry S. Foster, Homer Foster.

Very recently a "Temple of Honor" has been located here. We know nothing of its mysteries, but welcome it as a co-laborer in this grand reform.

A. Atwater Kent Completes Three Millionth Radio

"The week of September 29 marks an event unique in the history of radio, if not in American industry," said Joseph H. Burke, distributor for the Atwater Kent Manufacturing company of Philadelphia, today.

"In conjunction with eighty-two other distributors, we are joining in a 'Dealers' National Tribute' to Mr. A. Atwater Kent in celebration of the completion of his three millionth radio and the beginning of production of his fourth million."

The tribute has taken the form of congratulatory telegrams to Mr. Kent from distributors and dealers all over the country and it has been given more concrete expression in the presentation to the Philadelphia broadcaster and manufacturer of an elaborate gold watch and chain, appropriately engraved.

A unique feature of the gift is that each of Mr. Kent's eighty-three distributors sent one gold link for the chain, which was then welded together and presented as a whole by a committee representing its eighty-three donors.

"Another unusual feature," said Mr. Burke "is that on this occasion we, of the selling organization on the firing line, are telling Mr. Kent that we think of his achievement in making and selling three million radios. We are telling him through the medium of special advertising in each of our own territories, in order to acquaint the public with this record. All Atwater Kent dealers are also making special displays in their windows and special sales efforts to show their appreciation of his latest achievement.

"Reports from the thirty-two acre factory in Philadelphia are that business is good so far as Atwater Kent is concerned, with production at 4,000 sets a day and with the necessity for increasing that output apparently not more than a few weeks distant. There isn't a note of pessimism anywhere in our great organization and I look forward confidently to a healthy, substantial business in radios in our territory this fall and winter."

SUMMER MEALS

During the warm weather in most households the meat is cut down in quantity. A little with plenty of fresh vegetables will supply all the food value one needs for the warm days. If there is a bit of chicken, veal steak or even beefsteak, it will make a good meal combined in a chop suey.

Cut up a bunch of celery into small pieces and cook it with an onion or as one's taste dictates. Add a little boiling water with the finely cut cooked meat, a few fresh cooked green beans and simmer until all are nicely seasoned and the onion well cooked. Celery is better served in this dish not soft, but crisp and transparent. When serving place on a platter with a border of hot cooked seasoned rice. Use a dash of chop suey sauce over the dish before taking to the table.

Short Bread Cakes.—When you wish to serve something out of the ordinary try these: Line patty pans with short bread pastry, sometimes called Scotch shortbread. Fill the shells with any kind of cake batter—sponge or cup cake is preferred. Bake and remove carefully from the pans and cool. Scoop out a little from the center of the cakes and ice all over with icing, sprinkle with shredded coconut or shredded almonds and brown. When cool fill the centers with flavored whipped cream and pipe a border around the edges. Fresh berries with the cream will add another variation.

Creamed Sardines.—Drain one can of sardines. Remove backbones from fish and mash. Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one-fourth of a cupful of soft bread crumbs and one cupful of cream. When thoroughly heated add two hard cooked eggs finely chopped, the sardines, salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Serve on pieces of toasted bread.

Orange Ice Cream.—Add two cupfuls of cream slowly to two cupfuls of orange juice, add a little of the grated rind and sugar to taste. Freeze and serve with fresh chopped and sweetened strawberries.

METROPOLITAN THEATER

With the appearance in person of Charles "Buddy" Rogers and the showing of "The Sea God", the Metropolitan theater opens a gala week Thursday. The famous film star will appear at every performance and will demonstrate to the Metropolitan audiences his skill with various musical instruments and will also sing, "My Future Just Passed."

"The Sea God" in which Fay Wray and Richard Arlen are co-starred, is one of the most thrilling films of the year and depicts a startling array of thrills and incidents under seas. Arlen appears as a deep sea diver while Fay Wray is his sweetheart whose life he saves when he rescues her from a savage band of cannibals. Eugene Pallette has a splendid role in this picture, A fight between the cannibals and the crew of Arlen's boat is one of the dramatic incidents of this unusual picture.

A this time also the Metropolitan introduces to its audiences its new Master of Ceremonies, the famous Ted Mack, who has won plaudits and fame in New York.

On the stage will appear also a Publix revue staged by Frank Cambria, entitled "Birds of a Feather." Included in the list of headliners with this remarkable evrue are: The Arnaut Brothers, comedians, Stella Power and Miriam Lax, nightingales of the stage, the Four Carlton Brothers, with an unusual act and the Fred Evans Girls, a chorus of rare beauty and talent.

Roseland Closes Tomorrow; Crystal Ballroom Opens October 10

Check dancing tonight and tomorrow evening will feature the final week's program of the season at Roseland-on-the-Merrimack. The final dancing party of the year will therefore be staged at Roseland tomorrow evening. It will be the first time this season that check dancing will prevail on a Friday evening and the first time that check dancing has been scheduled for an entire week's program. Roland Russell's Rollicking Ramblers who have taken rank as the most popular dance band in the Merrimack Valley and who have been very important factors in making the present season the most successful in the long history of Roseland, will occupy the orchestral stage both tonight and tomorrow night.

Although Roseland will close tomorrow evening the Balmoral Associates, operators of both Roseland and the Crystal ballroom in Shawsheen Village will shift the scene of dancing activity to the latter ballroom on Friday evening October 10. This formal reopening of New England's most beautifully decorated ballroom will feature the famous Jacques Renard and his Cocoanut Grove orchestra of Boston. Crystal ballroom through the skilled work of master decorators has been transformed into a veritable palace of beauty. It will be Crystal's policy to present general admission dancing parties every Wednesday Friday and Saturday evening. Ample free automobile parking space is provided for everybody.

BABSON SAYS LIFE INSURANCE IS ONE OF FEW "DEPRESSION-PROOF" BUSINESSES

Sees Great Future if Idea of Service Is Stressed — People of United States Carry More Than Three-Quarters of All Life Insurance in the World — Are Buying at Rate of Billion a Month

Babson Park, Massachusetts, October 3, 1930. When business began to slide off last Winter, the analysts, statisticians, and economists began to hunt around for so-called "depression-proof" industries; i.e. industries which would hold up regardless of general business readjustments. One by one we have seen their selections hit by the business reaction. Strangely enough the few businesses that really have proved "depression-proof" were not mentioned in the early lists at all. Life insurance was one of them.

There is a very good reason why insurance sales have not only held up to the high level of 1929 but have even exceeded 1929 in the face of declining sales in nearly every other line of business. Life insurance means security, and in dull times people think more about security and less about speculation. Life insurance means putting by something for a rainy day. When the sun is shining no one thinks of rainy days, but when it rains the wisdom of preparation is brought forcibly home. People have learned that insurance is a mighty good umbrella!

Benefits of Insurance

Next to preachers, doctors, and school teachers, probably no person does so much good as an honest and competent insurance man. To be sure we sometimes regard them as pests when they are over-insistent, but really they are the ones who provide for old age, educate children, support the disabled, and do a host of other good things. The placing of insurance has now become a profession, and people should go to an experienced and honest man who will analyze their needs.

Although life insurance has long been a distinct benefit to mankind it offers many more advantages today than it did thirty years ago. Science, civic effort, and improved living conditions, are tending toward longer life. This fact added to the fact that insurance money is invested by the best experts and is most carefully supervised makes it possible for the insurance companies to offer more attractive policies than formerly. They offer a much wider variety of policies on more liberal terms than was once the case. Although no insurance company can beat the law of averages as to mortality, risk, and interest rates, yet it can do much more today for the average policy holder than in the early days.

Tremendous Growth

In 1880 life insurance was a comparatively insignificant factor, totalling only $1,508,000,000. Twenty-five years later, in 1905, it had grown to $12,800,000,000 an increase of 753 per cent. Now in 1930, twenty-five years later, total life insurance in the United States amounts to $100,000,000,000, another gain of 680 per cent. All phases of insurance have prospered, including industrial, ordinary, and group insurance. People of the United States now carry more than three-quarters of all the life insurance in the world. That is a tremendous national asset and one which augurs well for the future security of the country.

Moreover, this growth continues regardless of the ups and downs in general business. We are buying life insurance at the rate of more than $1,000,000,000 a month. In the first eight months of 1930 $8,651,501,000 total new insurance was purchased. Of this total $5,939,988,000 was ordinary insurance, $1,953,371,000 was industrial insurance, and $758,142,000 was group insurance. This clearly shows that there is still plenty of money and purchasing power in the country, and that people will use it for those things which they really want. In spite of quiet business, unemployment, and other unfavorable factors, life insurance sales from January 1, to August 31, have totalled larger than last year. It now looks as though the volume of new life insurance written in 1930 will exceed the $19,800,000,000 record of 1929!

A Great Financial Power

The tremendous factor that insurance companies have become in the investment field is worthy of greater attention by bankers and large investors. Not only are they the largest buyers of farm mortgages, but they also are a vital influence in the bond market. Out of their total assets of $17,600,000,000, 35 per cent, or $6,160,000,000 are invested in bonds. They have furnished about $3,168,000,000 capital for the building and improvement of our railroads; about $1,584,000,000 in the construction of our public utility systems; about $1,408,000,000 to the Federal government. states, and municipalities through the purchase of public bonds. In some states they are large lenders for home building, as well as for the development of metropolitan real estate.

In recent months the influence of insurance companies' buying has been felt very distinctly in the bond market. Shrewd financial experts handle insurance company investments. The private investor will do well to follow the lead of these men by purchasing good bonds at this time. Seldom has there been a better combination of factors for a rising bond market than has existed since Jnauary 1, 1930. Insurance companies' managements recognize this, and are taking advantage of it. Institutional buying of this sort, of course, is a prime factor in moving bond prices toward higher levels.

Service to Policy Holders Key-stone of Future Success

I look for continued growth of insurance in this country. I believe, however, that this growth will be more rapid if ways are found of still further increasing the service to the policy holder, and giving the policy holder more money for his insurance premium. Insurance company heads must be continually alert to avoid any laxness, inefficiency, or wastefulness which so often accompanies a rapid ascent to great wealth and financial power.

In reality the insurance company is merely a trustee. The policy holder is the real owner of the business. The policy holders' interest, therefore, should always come first. The better companies in the business know that the way to continued growth lies in the giving of greater service at lower cost. Any deviation from that policy would sooner or later cause a hostile public attitude towards insurance, whereas now the public holds a generally friendly and receptive attitude.

Business by the Babsonchart now registers 17 per cent below normal compared with 3 per cent above normal at this time a year ago.

"Roads" and "Streets"

The English word "road" probably comes from the old English "rad," compounded from a verb meaning to ride a horse, while our word "street" comes from the Latin strata, a paved way, one of those streets of beautifully matched stones which the modern traveler may still see, with the ruts made by the chariot wheels of the vanished citizens, in Pompeii and Herculaneum.—New York Times.

Where 'Coon Makes Home

Home to the raccoon is a hollow tree, usually an elm. The 'coon enters by an opening in one of the big limbs or high up in the trunk. The hollow sometimes extends down to the roots, and when the tree is felled, the animals are found in the stump at the level of the ground. Three or four of the roly poly animals sometimes live together in the same tree.

English Delicacy

Clotted cream is what is known as Devonshire cream in England. It is made by taking rich milk, placing it in a vessel and heating it to 175 degrees Fahrenheit. This will cause the cream to rise to the surface, where it can be skimmed off. In England this is sold in small earthenware jars, and is considered a great delicacy, to be served with fruit or cereal.

"Fast" Mail Carrying

The famous "pony express" established in 1860 to carry mail between St. Joseph, Mo., and California, required 80 riders and between 400 and 500 horses. The quickest trip ever made was the dispatching of President Lincoln's inaugural address over the route to Sacramento, Calif., the 1,400 miles being covered in 7 days and 17 hours.

The Bed in History

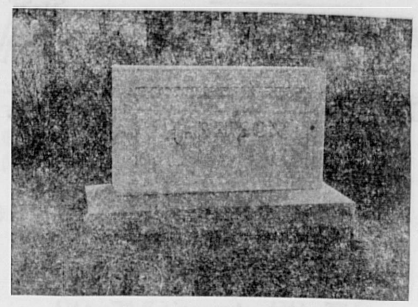

Generally speaking, the biggest beds were made in England during the Elizabethan period, when carved oak was favored, and some of the structures were immense. In France and Italy walnut was the preferred material until the Empire period, when mahogany beds came into use. Iron beds were first used in the Eighteenth century.

"Tree-Planting Mr. Adams"

The American Forestry association says that John Quincy Adams, sixth President, was given this nickname because he urged the planting of forests in order to grow naval supplies. In 1828 what might be called the first forest experiment station in America was established and acorns of live oaks were planted.

Gathering Life's Joy

The joy of life comes in its by-products. The man seeking fame is a sorry man, if his eyes are so closely on his objective that he cannot see the things by the wayside. The miles we walk or ride are avenues of adventure if we have the wit to see it.
